An exhibition about the interface between art and the everyday object. A reflection about design and a study of the historic role of artists in relation to the built environment. The centerpiece inspiring the exhibition is the historic Ciocca or Rezzonico chandelier, designed by Giuseppe Briati and realised in Murano, during the second half of the eighteenth century.

At the invitation of AS. Architecture-Studio, Valérie Jouve, Amaury Wenger and Wang Zhenfei have produced a new photographic series in a particular moment of architecture – under construction. Featuring the works of these three photographers, as well as a site-specific installation by Didier Faustino and a seminal film by Gordon Matta-Clark, the exhibition defines the building site as a space for potentialities and explores the complex relationships of architecture with time, body and image.
